

Oakland's pastor focuses the messages on real life issues and helps connect them with practical Biblical solutions. We want you to be able to say that what we talked about on the weekend gave you something that could help you on Monday: in your family, at your work, with your life.

At the core of it all is the fact that God has made all of us to live with purpose. It's definitely not about religion; it's about a relationship with God. It's not about pretending that we're perfect, it's about a God who is willing to show us His grace and help us to change and grow.
